Aaron gets out of bed and goes to the kitchen. He eats a big breakfast of fruit, yogurt, and granola. Then he goes outside and sits in the sun. He closes his eyes and takes a nap.

Aaron wakes up from his nap feeling refreshed. He goes inside and watches TV for a while. He eats some snacks and drinks some juice. He's having a great lazy day.

But then Aaron's friends come over. They want to play, but Aaron is too lazy to move. His friends try to get him to play, but he just yawns and says, "I'm too tired."

Aaron's friends are disappointed. They go outside and play without him. Aaron watches them from the window. He realizes that he's missing out on all the fun.

Aaron gets up and goes outside. He joins his friends in their game. He runs and jumps and plays just like he used to. He has so much fun that he forgets all about being lazy.

Aaron learns that it's okay to take a lazy day sometimes. But it's also important to be active and have fun with your friends.
