Lessons from Judy Woodruff

Judy Woodruff is an award-winning journalist who has been a pioneer in the field of broadcast news. She was the first woman to anchor a national nightly news program on a major network, and she has since gone on to host several other high-profile news programs. In her chapter of the book, Woodruff shares her insights on the importance of being authentic, resilient, and persistent. She also discusses the challenges that women face in leadership roles and the importance of creating a more inclusive workplace.

Lessons from Gwen Ifill

Gwen Ifill was a Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist who was known for her incisive political commentary and her ability to bridge partisan divides. She was the first African American woman to host a major political talk show, and she also moderated several presidential debates. In her chapter of the book, Ifill shares her insights on the importance of being fair, honest, and compassionate. She also discusses the challenges that people of color face in leadership roles and the importance of creating a more just and equitable society.

The Importance of Diversity and Inclusion

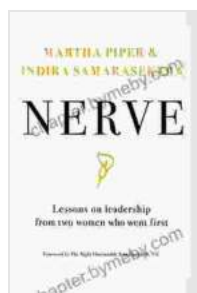

Throughout the book, Woodruff and Ifill emphasize the importance of diversity and inclusion in the workplace. They argue that a diverse workforce is essential for innovation, creativity, and success. They also discuss the ways in which businesses can create a more inclusive environment for all employees.

Lessons on Leadership from Two Women Who Went First is an inspiring and informative book that offers valuable insights on leadership, success, and the importance of diversity and inclusion. This book is a must-read for anyone who wants to learn from two of the most successful women in media.
