Elsie was a beautiful and charming woman who had a knack for getting what she wanted. Frances was a brilliant businesswoman with a head for numbers.

Together, they formed a partnership that would eventually become one of the most successful swindles in American history.

Elsie and Frances started their scam by selling fake stock in a gold mine. They convinced investors that the mine was worth millions of dollars, and they sold them shares for a fraction of the price.

Of course, the mine was nothing but a worthless piece of land. But Elsie and Frances were so convincing that they managed to swindle millions of dollars from investors.

As their scam grew, Elsie and Frances became more and more brazen. They bought expensive cars and jewelry, and they lived a lavish lifestyle.

But their luck couldn't last forever. Eventually, the investors started to catch on to their scheme. And in 1931, Elsie and Frances were arrested and charged with fraud.

They were found guilty and sentenced to prison. Elsie served two years in prison, and Frances served one year.

After their release from prison, Elsie and Frances continued to work together. They wrote a book about their experiences, and they gave lectures on how to avoid being scammed.

Elsie and Frances died in the 1970s, but their story continues to be told today. Or Elsie and Frances Fool the World is a cautionary tale about the dangers of greed and deception.
