Ali and Malcolm X first met in 1960, when Ali was still known as Cassius Clay. At the time, Ali was a rising star in the boxing world, while Malcolm X was one of the most prominent leaders of the Nation of Islam. Despite their different backgrounds, the two men quickly became friends. They shared a common commitment to justice and equality, and they both had a deep respect for each other's intelligence and charisma.

As their friendship grew, Ali and Malcolm X began to work together on a number of projects. They spoke out against racism and injustice, and they both played a role in the civil rights movement. In 1964, Ali converted to Islam and changed his name to Muhammad Ali. Malcolm X was one of the first people to congratulate him on his decision.

However, the friendship between Ali and Malcolm X would not last. In 1965, Malcolm X left the Nation of Islam after he had a falling out with its leader, Elijah Muhammad. Ali remained a member of the Nation of Islam, and he began to distance himself from Malcolm X. In 1967, Malcolm X was assassinated by members of the Nation of Islam. Ali was devastated by Malcolm X's death, and he would never forget his friend.
