Maria Victoria Palacios' memoir, Under The Rainbow, is a powerful and inspiring story of resilience and overcoming adversity. Palacios was born in a small town in rural Mexico in the 1940s, and her childhood was marked by poverty, violence, and discrimination. Despite the challenges she faced, Palacios remained determined to break free from the cycle of poverty and violence that surrounded her.

Palacios' writing is both lyrical and haunting, as she vividly portrays the hardships and injustices she faced as a young girl. She describes the hunger and cold she endured, the beatings she received from her father, and the discrimination she experienced as a member of an indigenous community. Despite all of this, Palacios never gave up on her dream of a better life.

With the help of a supportive teacher, Palacios was able to attend school and eventually became a teacher herself. She devoted her life to helping others, and she founded a school for indigenous children in her hometown. Palacios' story is a reminder that even in the darkest of times, there is always hope.
